

FARMERS' PLATFORM PROPOSAL MADE TO CONVENE THE WEST MAYORS

MOVE STARTED TO GET FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL AID IN MATTER OF RECONSTRUCTION

A proposal to have the mayors of the three prairie provinces meet in a joint conference to formulate plans whereby the federal and provincial governments may give badly needed assistance in the matter of reconstruction, has been approved by practically all the chief magistrates of the principal cities, and Mayor Hardie, of Lethbridge, is convener of the meeting which is to be held in Regina.

Major Clarke of Edmonton, received a wire from H. J. Daly, secretary of the reconstruction committee of the federal government, which includes a number of the Ottawa cabinet ministers, that the suggestion from the Western Mayors had been turned over to the minister of labor and would also be dealt with by the repatriation committee.

At the special meeting of the council committee, Edmonton, the mayor explained that the western mayors all agree that most serious difficulty ties due to the war face the "prairie municipalities, and there must be every assistance from all the governments to help tide over the crisis. It is felt that since private individuals and others are being reimbursed by the federal government for losses the federal government for losses sustained from the war, it is no more than justice that cities should be given some aid for the very obvious setbacks suffered during the last four years. It is also proposed that the federal government shall be urged to help the cities pass over the labor crisis by the development of public works and by the building of railways where such are urgently required.

GOOD NEWS.

The message received by Mr. Welliver last week to the effect that the C.N.R. would build into Red Deer this year was good news. It was the best news we have heard for a long time.

Some people are still sceptical and say we have heard that before. That may be so. But now it is different. The C.N.R. is under government control, and they are not likely to break faith. The war is over, and many things are going to happen in this great west that will open the eyes of the pessimists.

We believe Alberta is on the eve of great prosperity. In the past few years, the entire West. Starving millions need our grain, our pork, our sheep, our fish, and our produce. The great prairie country needs our abundant coal, devastated Belgium and France need our timber.

The East say to us "go to it, we have our eye on you. They are interested in the west as never before, and there will be a great rush of settlers from Ontario and the east this summer, but a far greater rush from the United States. Land values will stiffen, cities and towns will become more prosperous than for several years, and there will, we believe, be a great revival in the business life and energy of this great sleeping giant of the west.

In Red Deer, there is no reason to doubt, we will have our full share. Already there is a strong optimistic spirit prevailing among our citizens. Fred. Lund will build one of the finest, if not the finest garages in Alberta, there will be nothing like it outside the big cities. We are promised a Land Titles office by the Provincial government, and a strong effort will be made at a public meeting tonight to induce the government to reopen the Dominion Lands office at Red Deer.

The Dominion government will build the new post office, and there will be without doubt, a forward movement by those who want to keep up with the times in building, and property that has been a drag on the market will regain to a large extent its face value. As we said at the beginning it is good news to receive a promise that the C.N.R. will lay steel into Red Deer this year. The road head is built, and all we need is the steel.

No doubt we should soon hear that the Acme branch of the C.P.R. is under consideration, as Mr. Walliver is writing to the company on behalf of the Board of Trade for further information on the question.

THE HIGHEST QUESTION.

New York Tribune, Dec. 15.
Four and a half years ago, as now we know, three nations had the power to decide the fate of the world. One was seized with a horrible lust to decide it alone by archaic force. For daring to do that she has been disarmed and chained.

Now there are two. These two speak the same tongue. They are, as we believe, highly qualified to hear aloft the torch of human progress. They have only to reach out their hands and take control of such circumstances as shape and alter the destinies of mankind. It is an augury of opportunity, in history, rich beyond imagination in potentialities of achievement.

And how do they approach it? By beginning at once to discuss in an acrimonious manner whether one shall be trusted to have a bigger pavy than the other.

By force of circumstances America finds itself engaged in a navy building programme which rivals that of any other power on earth. That any other power on earth turns out to be one only—Great Britain. And then, unawares, without thought, certainly without any national reflection, the American people become committed to a phrase—"freedom of the seas." It means what you intend it to mean. If you mean only that the seas shall be free to all nations, there is nothing to it at all, for the seas have been free in time of peace.

If you mean that the seas shall be free also in time of war, you mean something the implications of which are startling in the extreme to the people of Great Britain, for they have been unable to control the seas they could not have beaten the demon power.

Not for the British navy, which controlled the seas, Kultur would now rule the fate of the world. Everyone knows this. Only an Englishman can really feel it. And, feeling it deeply, he interprets our phrase as a challenge to British naval supremacy. He cannot help it.

Let us not deceive ourselves as to what we are talking about. Last week there was a message from the United States ship George Washington the following inspired political message:

"There is every indication that in his utterances in France the President will make plain his proposition that all come to the peace table prepared to make sacrifices for a lasting peace and that no domination by any one shall exist."

The one most notable case of armed domination present in the minds of people in Great Britain is the domination of the sea by reason of having the greatest navy—the navy that beat the demon power. This message was given from the President's ship. It must have been intended to produce a certain effect. It did. The next day there was this declaration from the English Minister of Munitions:

"We don't intend, no matter what argument and appeals are addressed to us, to prevent ourselves in any way to any further restrictions which will tend to limit our navy maintaining its well tried and well deserved supremacy."

That is very definite. It had been invited. But what a spectacle for the world to see—England and America making speeches at each other in this fashion.

Pancy, then, what the enemies of Anglo-American understanding can and will be able to make of the statement by Rear Admiral Badger, chairman of the executive committee of the General Board of the Navy, before the House Naval Affairs committee last week, that the second largest navy is not enough. "Germany," he said "possessed the second largest navy in the world. And this, he thought, was the great lesson of the war."

A more ill-timed occasion for such a statement of American naval policy could not have been invented. This is no time to be discussing questions of competitive naval policy. They are relatively trivial.

Shall the great English-speaking peoples join their strength in full understanding, and employ it to keep the peace of the world forever?

That is the paramount question. Let it be answered in the affirmative and every other problem will take its proper place.

HAIGS FINAL REPORT.

Sir Douglas Haig's last report, says the Edmonton Journal, took the military narrative to the end of the war. We cannot easily forget how great and how well warranted were fears for the Allied cause that were entertained at the time. Now, the picture, in his final report of the war, the story of the wonderful transformation that was wrought in the succeeding months, the complete triumph which was ultimately won. It was a complete triumph he makes clear.

When the armistice was signed by the enemy, we are told, his defensive powers had already been definitely destroyed. Continuance of hostilities would have meant only disaster to the German armies and an armed invasion of Germany.

Most of us would like to have seen the German army more definitely smashed than they were, and as they undoubtedly would have been if the surrender had not come. The revelation was made at Paris the other day that Castelnau was just about to launch a huge offensive in Lorraine that would have been quickly decisive, when the armistice was signed.

But we can console ourselves, as Sir David Beatty consoled himself, that simply for the sake of carrying the fight, which was an enemy to definite conclusion land or sea it was not worth sacrificing the life of a single additional Allied soldier or sailor.

If the war had gone on beyond November 11th, we, as well as the enemy, must have sustained further heavy losses. The armistice gave us all the security that was required. The enemy could not have yielded more completely. Allied military and political leaders would accordingly have had no warrant for continuing the struggle just for the purpose of further smashing up the German armies.

The most surprising revelation now made by Sir Douglas Haig is that the victories which forced the conclusion of the armistice were won by the side that was inferior in numbers. In the last three months of the war, he tells us, fifty-nine British divisions engaged and defeated ninety-nine separate German divisions.

Such a record was possible only where the highest qualities of leadership were brought to bear, and where the rank and file were enlisted among the allied commanders. Sir Douglas by his report puts it down to all this talk. The British were most fortunate in their allies in this war, as they were not in the war with Napoleon.

The British commander-in-chief declares "that we can look back on the years that have gone with satisfaction, undimmed by any hint of discord or conflict of interests or ideals." Those who sought to make it appear otherwise were doing the enemy's work. Having been so completely discredited by the course of events, they should not be in a position to do any great harm in the period of final adjustment.

The spirit of Poch and Haig and their associates will, we trust, be the spirit of the representatives of the various Allied nations who have to follow up their work and assure to the world the full fruits of the great victory which our soldiers and sailors have won for us.

Medicine Hat, Jan. 8.—"We have got to get together," said H. W. Woods, president of the United Farmers of Alberta, at the Canadian Council of Agriculture, to the Alberta Federation of Labor Wednesday afternoon.

The mutual desire to destroy poverty would form the common basis of this new association. Mr. Wood intimated, "I have known of certain differences and suspicions for three years," said Mr. Wood, "and I haven't tried to hurry the association. We have got to take our time. Each convention is bringing us closer together. Some friends expect quicker action in the development of the new social order than I. I am not so much interested in quick action as in safe building."

He concluded with an appeal for tolerance and a warning to get rid of any idea of schism at this moment.

UNIVERSITY NOTES

In the course in Agriculture for returned soldiers at the University of Alberta, fifty-two men are now registered. The teachers speak highly of the attitude of the men to the work; their powers of concentration and quickness of apprehension and their eagerness to learn. The new greenhouse which is to be used in connection with this course is now approaching completion. It will be more than three times the size of the old greenhouse, but every square foot is urgently needed at once for educational purposes. It will enable the horticulture and seed work to be carried on during the winter months.

Only one case of influenza, and that a mild one, has developed since the University of Alberta reopened after Christmas. It occurred immediately after the student's return and was evidently brought in from home. It is hoped that so far as the University is concerned, the epidemic is now a thing of the past. Every precaution is being taken to prevent its reappearance and vigilance in this respect will be unceasing until the end of the session.

The Philosophical Society of the University of Alberta which were discontinued on account of the epidemic of influenza, will be resumed on the evening of Tuesday, January 14th. On that occasion a paper will be read by Prof. E. K. Broadus on "Tennyson as Poet Laureate." The public is cordially invited to attend this lecture.

The Department of Extension of the University of Alberta which has been for two years providing outlines on various topics for clubs, is extending this branch of its service and offers assistance to those who wish to avail themselves of this assistance should send their names with a suggestion as to the kind of reading desired, to the Department of Extension. The request will be referred to the members of the faculty most competent to advise on the subject and the Department will be glad to lend the necessary books from its library.

The Royal Air Force, Toronto, has shipped to the University of Alberta on the 28th of December, 1918, a carload of aeroplane material as a gift. This consists of two Curtiss biplanes complete, five aeroplane engines, a large amount of bombing and wireless equipment and machine guns of various types. This generous gift will not only be of value for scientific purposes, but will be of interest to the general public. It is hoped that at an early date, when the parts have been unpacked, it will be possible to give a public exhibition.

At a special examination for licence to practice as pharmacists in the Province of Alberta recently held at the University of Alberta, two candidates have been passed by the Senate. These are I. C. Bricker, Hain, and Dean Kerr has been called to Ottawa to attend a meeting of the Repatriation committee to be held on January 14th. The Heads of the Canadian Universities are being brought together to discuss with the government the relation of the Universities to educational work for returned soldiers.

they want to, but the official conference must be held in the full light of day from the first meeting of the delegates to the solemn assembly wherein will be exchanged the signatures which, when ratified by the parliaments will forever unite the nations in a fraternal society."

The principal argument presented against open conferences is that it would be imprudent to reveal to the public such differences of opinion as might lead to internal misunderstandings, but those who favor full publicity reply that concealment never formed the basis of friendship and that more will be gained than lost by an outspoken statement of such real differences as may exist. Moreover, the open debates would permit public opinion in every country to control the action of its own delegates.

"Oriental" Hagglings May Occur
Those arguing in favor of secrecy say that publicity would hamper the tactics of the delegates. Indeed, it has been customary in previous peace conferences for the various parties to haggle and barter like two orientals in an eastern market, the seller demanding twice as much as he expects to get, the buyer offering half as much as he expects to pay. To the partisans of open publicity reply that the time has come to abandon this sort of bargaining. The application of just principles throughout the world should bear no resemblance to the chatter of persons trying to get the better of one another.

Therefore, it is believed that there are no sound objections to full publicity, particularly as most of the real work of the congress will be done in various commissions working outside of the plenary sessions. It is proposed that these commissions shall be composed of the general trend of their deliberations. Such commissions would serve to focus public opinion on important issues and act as a damper on wild rumors.

IMPRISONING LOUISE

(1) View from the Chateau verandah.
(2) Giant Steps in the Paradise Valley.
(3) At Lake Louise.

Nobody ever gets accustomed to Lake Louise. You come down in the morning, thinking of cantaloupes and coffee. And at breakfast you have your first—yes, it is a smashing glimpse of the lake. No water could be so green-blue, so shot with anethal half-dimensions, so plent with undersea diamonds and gauded angles and shimmering sapphires. The slender cliffs to the left make a frame for it—the jade slopes to the right give it fire by their sombre contrast. But that dazzling, unbelievable whiteness that froth over the top of the world at the lake's end—that soaring, singing, living wonder that somebody tethered to the earth by the process of naming it the Victoria Glacier—is unrelaxing than Louise itself.

This is his manna from Mt. Niblock with an IXX 14 camera, and no real looking that a hot day makes you want to put it up beside the electric fan as a chill-provoker. Mr. Wilcox's famous Lak' Oharo study in another bit of wizardry.

"It took me just four years to get that one," he told me. "I believe I brought the camera back at least ten times, and when I finally had a promising day, I waited for eight or twelve o'clock for the psychological moment that brought the light I wanted on the water and the mountains."

Another scene the picture-maker coveted was the sparkling Giant's Steps in Paradise Valley. "I worked on it for two or three days and I had a man to help me cut down a tree that interfered with the camera and we tidied up heaven knows how much rubbish. I don't believe in making a scene artistically natural."

world of films and plates.

In addition to the delicacy and correctness of his photographs, Mr. Wilcox can claim to have taken the largest picture ever achieved in Canada at a height of 10,000 feet. This is his manna from Mt. Niblock with an IXX 14 camera, and no real looking that a hot day makes you want to put it up beside the electric fan as a chill-provoker.

In twelve," said Mr. Wilcox. "Often he spells his whole dozen. You can't get a 'little careless' and still have some sort of result in ordinary photography. But in color work, it's all or nothing."

"Nowadays I'm going over all the old beauty spots here in the new way. I have the composition worked out from my experiments of years ago. The precise location of the camera is marked in every case. All that I have to do is to wait for the right light effect."

Sixty-two thousand people came to see Louise last year. Won't it be wonderful, folks, when the time comes that will give every pilgrim the chance to carry it away with him, imprisoned in a little gorgeous opal-colored miniature?

But, alas, even that went altogether awry. The true Louise—over, you can't photograph the spirit of the tree, the cool breath that blows straight from the glittering head of the glacier, the puff of snow-spray and the long rumble that spells avalanche to the transect watcher on the hotel verandah. And you can't have a fairy movie-man standing behind your eye, microphone carrying the shifting shadows of cloudland into the spell of your lake.

Don't Let Your Money slip through your fingers

Your money slips through your fingers when you pay more for the same goods which you can get here for less. Certain overhead expenses are added to the cost of the goods; the addition of these expenses does not add to the quality of the goods. When these expenses are eliminated or lessened you get the most for your money.

When you buy groceries for credit your money is slipping through your fingers. You not only pay for the credit that is extended to you, but you pay for the credit extended the other fellows who fail to pay. Also book-keepers' salaries are added to the cost of the goods.

Your money slips through your fingers when you get free delivery. It should be called "pay delivery," as you must help pay for the upkeep of the delivery outfit and the delivery man's wages. Money is slipping through your fingers when you pay some one to do for you the things you can do for yourself.

Your money is slipping through your fingers when you buy something you do not want. Here you can examine all goods without argument or persuasion. You take your own time and the price of each article is before you.

Buy your household wants here and save money—the stock is all new, fine and fresh.
